EXPOSED: CHANGING THE AGONY AGAINST HUMANITY NUN ACCUSES POLICE OF COMPLICITY IN ATTACK

NEW DELHI, OCTOBER 24 (REUTERS): A nun in eastern India has spoken out for the first time on live television about allegations she was gang-raped by more than 40 men in August, accusing police of complicity in Hindu attacks on Christians. A string of attacks on Christians by Hindus over the controversial issue of conversions in poor tribal areas has killed at least 37 people in the past two months, mainly in Orissa state where most of the violence is concentrated.

"State police failed to stop the crimes, failed to protect me from the attackers, they were friendly with the attackers," Sister Merina told a news conference on Friday. The nun's case became part of the wider controversy surrounding the violence, which sparked an international outcry and drew strong condemnation from Pope Benedict. Her face covered by a black scarf, she said she was looking at the cameras, she gave a blow-by-blow account of a case that has become emblematic of the religious violence that has raged there since.

The nun's statement came two days after the Supreme Court denied her appeal to order a federal probe into the case. Nine people have been arrested so far, and an identity parade is ready to be set up, but the nun has refused to cooperate with Orissa police, saying she does not have faith in them. One officer has already been suspended in the case for dereliction of duty. In her statement, Sister Merina said she was dragged out of the house where she was sheltering by armed men who first threatened to decapitate her or burn her alive. She was then taken to a deserted building nearby. "They pulled out my saree and one of them stepped on my right hand and another on my left hand and then a third person raped me on the verandah," she said. After she was paraded to a nearby market she pleaded the police to help, but "they did not move," and later went to top breasting a full police complaint, asking her if she knew "what will be the consequence" of filing it. Both India's central government and Christian leaders have accused the Orissa state government of running a blind eye.

Orissa police came under fire for ignoring a medical report into the case that authorities said confirmed a rape took place. Human rights groups and government ministers suspect militant Hindu groups were responsible for stoking the religious violence to shore up their vote base ahead of elections in 2009.

"Do you know what will be the consequences"

Following is the first person account of the nun who was allegedly raped during the recent communal violence in Orissa:

"ON AUGUST 24 around 4:30 pm, hearing the shouting of a large crowd at the gate of Divyajyoti Pastoral Centre, I ran out through the back door and escaped to the forest along with others. We saw our house going up in flames.

Around 8:30 pm we came out of the forest and went to the house of a Hindu gentleman who gave us shelter. On August 25, around 1:30 pm, the mob entered the room where I was staying in that house, one of them slapped me on my face, caught my hair and pulled me out of the house. Two of them were holding my neck to cut off my head with axe. Others told them to take me out to the road, I saw Father Chellan also being taken out and being beaten. The mob consisting of 40-50 men was armed with lathis, axes, spades, crowbars, iron rods, sickles etc.

They took both of us to the main road. Then they led us to the burnt down Jansavi building saying that they were going to throw us into the smoldering fire. When we reached the Jansavi building, they threw me to the verandah on the way to the dining room which was full of ash and broken glass pieces. One of them tore my blouse and others my undergarments.

Father Chellan protested and they beat him and pulled him out from there. They pulled out my saree and one of them stepped on my right hand and another on my left hand and then a third person raped me on the verandah mentioned above.

"When it was over, I managed to get up and put my petticoat and saree. Then another young man caught me and took me to a room near the staircase. He opened his pants and was attempting to rape me when they reached there.

'No health snag in Uranium mining'

Thangnagan Hungry
Shillong | October 24

THE EXPERTS have spoken. Uranium mining in Meghalaya will not be detrimental to human health, according to renowned technocrats who spoke during a recent national seminar on "toxicity of chemicals and their hazards with special reference to heavy metals", held over a two-day period at St. Edmund's College, Shillong.

According to Dr. S. K. Malhotra, head of the Public Awareness Division, Bhabha Atomic Research Centre, the opposition to mining the ore is "other than scientific perception."

He was referring to the involvement of politicians, though he did admit that as a government servant it was not appropriate for him to make such a statement. On Jaduguda, located in Jharkhand, where the film 'The

How much of exposure is harmful?

The dose of radiation that is ingested by humans is calculated in milli sievert (mSv/year). The exposure for an average person is about 3.6 mSv/year, 90 percent of which comes from natural sources of radiation.

1000 mSv per single dose causes nausea. 10,000 mSv is fatal within minutes. According to findings, the background radiation should not be more than 4.60 (3.80 + 1.00) mSv/year for the general public in the Damodar area, where mining is proposed to be undertaken.

Why nuclear power?

- Nuclear fuel is available for multiple centuries.
- The safety record, backed by studies, is superior among major energy sources.

- Virtually pollution free
- Its use will help in preserving precious fossil resources for future generations
- Despite popular belief, its costs are competitive and declining
- Waste can be securely managed over the long term

How is nuclear fuel converted into electricity?

A nuclear power plant uses nuclear fuel to generate heat in a nuclear reactor, which produces steam to run a turbine generator. The mechanism is similar to what goes on in a thermal power plant, excepting the difference that the reactor takes the place of the boiler.

Bodha weeps at Jaduguda" further inflamed the hue and cry over the mining of uranium by the Uranium Corporation of India Limited (UCIL), he said. "The realities are different... the facts are available on websites and printed matter. All surroundings are monetized."

Delivering a special guest lecture on the topic "Nuclear Power - a safe, environmentally benign, economically viable source of electricity", Malhotra presented a slide show and elaborated on why nuclear power was the need of the hour (see box), insisting that the word 'cooperation' in nuclear cooperation should be replaced by commerce, he pointed out the fact that India has the required technology to process nuclear fuel. The country has 17 nuclear reactors under the control of the Department of Atomic Energy.

Indian troops drinking too much

NEW DELHI, OCTOBER 24 (AFP): India's million-plus army is consuming much more alcohol than permitted, causing huge financial losses to the state and raising suspicions of widespread black marketing, a report said Thursday. Among the biggest culprits is the Indian army's most prestigious hospital in New Delhi and a military spy unit attached to Prime Minister Manmohan Singh's office, the Midday evening newspaper said.

When contacted by AFP, defence ministry and army sources confirmed there was a serious problem. Indian soldiers are allowed a certain amount of heavily subsidised liquor for personal consumption, but the report said the limit was being widely flouted. Dravid 44 army units had inflicted a loss of around 100 million rupees (at least two million dollars) on the government over the past 18 months, the paper said.

"We suspect some of it is finding its way into the civilian market and we are trying to plug it," a colonel from the army's Central Stores Department told AFP. A major general was arrested in 2005 after he smuggled two truck-loads of liquor to the open market, where military alcohol can be sold for double the price soldiers pay. The army recently issued smart cards to its 1.25 million troopers to keep tabs on consumption.
